WHAT IMPACTED FUND PERFORMANCE IN 2024?

The tax-exempt municipal bond market produced solid total returns for 2024 as elevated income levels more than offset the decline in bond prices as yields rose. The interest rate hikes by the Federal Reserve in 2022 and 2023, which sought to slow the economy and bring down the rate of inflation, helped produce the higher income levels that benefited investors in 2024. Also, the tightening of municipal credit spreads, as yields narrowed between lower-quality and higher-quality bonds, also contributed to the solid returns for the year.

The Investor Class Shares of the Baird Municipal Fund (BMQSX) posted a net total return of 2.69% in 2024. The Bloomberg Municipal Index, a broad-based U.S. bond market index and the Fund’s primary benchmark, had a total return of 1.05%.

The Fund outperformed its primary benchmark in 2024. Drivers of Fund performance described below are relative to the Fund’s primary benchmark.

Contributors to Performance

- Credit - Overweight to lower-quality issues as spreads narrowed
- Sector - Overweight to revenue issues, notably housing and industrial development revenue (IDR) / pollution control revenue (PCR)
- Security selection - Particularly within housing
- Curve - Barbell posture, overweight to maturities less than 1-year and greater than 15-years
- Pricing services – The Fund uses ICE to value its portfolio holdings, while the Fund’s primary benchmark index uses another pricing service to value its constituent holdings

Detractors from Performance

- Security selection - Lower-coupon issues underperformed as rates rose
